During the latter part of Gen. Earle's speech there was great impatience manifested by Capt. Tillman's friends and they did their best to cry Gen. Earle down. "Nobody hears you," cried one. "Run him out boys," said another. Beyond these interruptions, however, no special incident marked the speech of Gen Earle.

A QUESTION OF PISTOLS.

The situation was made more thrilling by Maj. Woodw ard, calling to the audience that several Tillmanites were on the stand with hands on their pistols. It is impossible to paint the scene that followed the announcement. With terrified faces nearly all the ladies left the surroundings, while several of the audience prepared to shield themselves from an anticipated voiley of lead. ALMOST A DIFFICULTY.

Mr. James Tillman, a nephew of Capt. Tillman, who was on the stand at the time, thought that Maj. liam H. Brooks, et al, Defendants.

Plaintiff brought this action in the Probate Court for said county to recover her dower in a certain tract or parcel of land aliened by the deceased husband in his life time, and during his coverture with the plaintiff, and which was, at the commencement of the action, in the possession of the defendants.

The right of the plaintiff to dower in said lands was contested by the defendants on several grounds, but principally upon the ground that the plaintiff had accepted her distributive share in the personal estate of her husband, who died intestate, and was therefore barred of her dower in said lands. The Judge of Probate after full hearing rendered his decree adjudging dower to the plaintiff in the lands in question. From this judgment the defendants appealed to this Court on several grounds.

John A. Robinson, Defendant.

This case was heard before me on the pleadings and all other proceedings had in the cause, including the testimony taken by the Master, the Master's report, and the exceptions of the plaintiffs thereto.

From a careful consideration of the case, and the exceptions to the Master's report, I am satisfied that the conclusions reached by the Master are fully sustained by the testimony, and that his report should be confirmed.

As to the exceptions relating to the jurisdiction of the Probate Court, and the decree thereof, under which the lands of Hezekiah I. Clinkscales, deceased, were sold to ald the personal assets in paying his debts, it may be remarked that the Probate Court certainly had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and in Gen. Earle.
It was while Capt. Tillman was speaking that the music began. He stood before the audicnee possibly five minutes before he was permitted to open his mouth. As soon as he could make himself heard Capt. Tillman said this was the third time he had addressed the people of Fairfield county.

A man in the audience cried out—"Yes, and I hope it will be the last time." Capt. Tillman replied that the next time he came it would be as the Governor of South Carolina, and those who didu't like it could not help themselves.

Here the confusion again became so great that the speaker had to cease. During a lull. Capt. Tillman said they would not let him speak because they knew if he did so he speak because they knew if he did so he and if he could convert anybody for God's sake let them be converted.
